"Free!" said the tall woman, and her voice cracked like a whip. Then she looked at her companions, and after a while she smiled a little. Turning back to Medra, she said, "We're prisoners, and so freedom is a thing we study. You came here through the walls of our prison. Seeking freedom, you say. But you should know that leaving Roke may be even harder than coming to it. Prison within prison, and some of it we have built ourselves." She looked at the others. Rose had looked after herself from an early age; and this was one of the reasons Diamond loved her. With her, he knew what freedom was. Without her, he could attain it only when he was hearing and singing and playing music..with her when he went on. There was a terrible shortage of coppers in her household these days..The voices of the mages talking were like the voices of the stream running. The stream said its words and they said theirs, but none of them were the right words..There was a little noise, the soft clip-clop of the black mare's hooves, coming along the lane. There were streaks of grey..So it was. For the rest of his life, Medra kept the doors of the Great House on Roke. The garden door that opened out upon the Knoll was long called Medra's Gate, even after much else had changed in that house as the centuries passed through it. Never again. He had never given his heart to it. It had been a game to him, a game to play with Darkrose.
