But here luck turned against them, for no sooner had they reached the shore again when the sailors descended on them. The jailor had at first woken up and, finding his captives gone, had organized a searching party which set out just as Amos and the prince reached the boat. Nolan followed her gaze. "No one out there." He moved to the window, peered at the clearing beyond. "Not a soul." "Exactly." She squinted across the vast tasteful expanse of Party-land, then stood up and waved. "I think I've recognized someone," she said excitedly, preening her paper feathers with her free hand. Far away, someone waved back...sometimes getting on their knees when the clearance lowered. "In the area that concerns all of us here in our day-to-day lives, the accelerating pace of the space program has brought a lot of excitement in the last two decades. Some inspiring achievements have helped offset the less encouraging news from other quarters: We have established permanent bases on the Moon and Mars; colonies are being built in space; a manned mission has reached the moons of Jupiter; and robots are out exploring the farthest reaches of the Solar System and beyond. But" --he extended his arms in an animated sigh---"these operations have been national, not international. Despite the hopes and the words of years gone by, militarization has followed everywhere close on the heels of exploration, and we are led to the inescapable conclusion that a war, if it comes, would soon spread beyond the confines of the surface and jeopardize our species everywhere. We must face up to the fact that the danger now threatening us in the years ahead is nothing less than that." "Very well then, I have a plan." Again Amos began to whisper through the bars, and Jack smiled and nodded. "Well, you see, Dr. Kolodny, what she believes is that the end of the world is about to happen. Next.
