"You're saying evolution adds up to a succession of transitions like that?" Colman nodded. "I guess so. I'll probably be asleep when you come off duty. Better give me a call." "No, Curtis. I just think you're too sweet for this world." "You too." The image vanished from the screen. "You don't understand," Jay said. "On Earth, a lot of people would see that as their big ambition in life." "You really wanna know?" An intense note had come suddenly into Driscoll's voice. "Okay, okay. Never mind the sackcloth-and-ashes act. How about cleaning it up?" Wendy sighed. "We all have our plights and pickles." Bernard grinned. "It takes some getting used to, doesn't it? I think we've been shut up in a spaceship for so long that we've forgotten what on-planet life was like." Clem waved an arm casually without looking back. "Go ahead," he said. "Can't see as you really need any, though. You're pretty safe up here. We don't get many burglars." Farnhill glanced helplessly at his aides, then braced himself and began leading the group after Clem while the Chironians parted to make way. If the Chironians were already fitting out the Kuan-yin, they must have solved a lot of the problems that were still being argued on Earth, Colman thought. The whole planet, he realized as he reflected on it, was a powerhouse of progress, unchecked by any traditions of unreason and with no vested-interest obstructionists to hold it back. If the pattern continued until Chiron became a fully populated world, it would effectively leave Earth back in the Stone Age within a century.
